ALBUQUERQUE ————— NEW MEXICO
TUESDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 14, 1905.

What a Fall Was There

HERE was a very pathetic scene at the officeholders' convention in the old "dobe" palace at Santa Fe last Friday, which seems to have escaped the attention of all the reporters. The Globe-Democrat came while the convention was in session, and one of the delegates, who could read English, found a special dispatch from Washington which stated positively that the president had determined to urge single statehood in his message. And the exuberance of joy which followed this discovery can be better imagined than described. The directors, and commissioners, and trustees, and attorneys, and members of boards, and first and second assistants of everything, were all as happy as though they had been at camp meeting and had just got religion. But the joy was short lived, and that's the pity of it. In the midst of the abounding hilarity the gentleman who had brought the good news reached the end of the dispatch, and as soon thereafter as he could catch his breath, he arose and in a very funeral tone delivered himself of words and figures as follows, to-wit: "Say, fellows, this d— thing means the other way. When the president says he is going to favor single statehood in his message, he means he is going to advise congress to make a single state of the two territories!"

The deep, depressing gloom, which settled over the "dobe" room, immediately following this announcement, was so thick you might have cut it with a knife, and the language which prevailed there for a few minutes wouldn't do to print.

True American Sentiment

AD the "Chronicle" been published in New York it is improbable that it would have supported Mr. Hearst in the contest just closed, but if as a matter of fact he received one more honest vote than Mayor McClellan he should have the office if it requires the entire force of the United States to seat him. The one chance which Mayor McClellan has to regain something of the national prestige which he has just lost is to join heartily and sincerely with Mr. Hearst in going to the bottom of the alleged frauds, with the intent that in good faith the man who was elected mayor shall be seated as such. No American, thank heavens, can ever hope even to be considered for high office who has ever in his life knowingly profited by a fraud on the ballot.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Thousands of republicans and citizens' union members are writing letters to Hearst urging him to prosecute the case with all the vigor he can summon, and pledging him their support. He will have help and good wishes from all parties and all localities. A much larger issue than municipal ownership is involved in Mr. Hearst's fight. The question of a free ballot and an honest count is at stake. This is something which will appeal to public spirited citizens all over the country. Nobody in this contest cares today about the policies for which Mr. Hearst stood in the election. All that is at issue is whether he received a plurality of the votes which were honestly cast. On this question Mr. Hearst will be backed by the republican party of the country as well as by all other men who are determined that a republican form of government shall be maintained in the United States.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE moral tone of Albuquerque is unquestionably higher than it was a few years ago. It may be noticed that the printers on the Monday Morning Journal now pull down the blinds when they go to work Sunday evening—and that's an indication of progress. Even the simple fact that a printer on a seven-times-a-week paper knows when Sunday comes is of itself substantial evidence that the tide of religious sentiment in the community is coming up.

Definition of Honesty

HERE are men who do not divide actions merely into those that are honest and those that are not, but create a third sub-division—that of jaw honesty, of that kind of honesty which consists in keeping clear of the penitentiary. . . . The distinction upon which we must insist is the vital, deep-lying, unchangeable distinction between the honest man and the dishonest man. . . . There are men who use the phrase "practical politics" as merely a euphemism for dirty politics, and it is such men who have brought the word "politician" into discredit. There are other men who use the noxious phrase "business is business" as an excuse for every kind of mean and crooked work, and these men make honest Americans hang their heads because of some of the things they do. . . . The scoundrel who falls can never by any possibility be as dangerous as the scoundrel who succeeds, and of all the men in the country, the worst citizens, those who should excite in our minds the most contemptuous abhorrence, are the men who have achieved great wealth, or any other form of success, in any save a clean and straightforward manner.—President Roosevelt at Atlanta.

THE general manager of the Santa Fe refrigerator dispatch line, who admits violations of the rebate laws, is apparently trying to get into line for a life insurance presidency at $50,000 a year.—Springfield Republican.

Has Injured New Mexico

VERY fair idea of the great injury that has been done to New Mexico by the exposure of the crooked methods of her delegate elect can be obtained from the subjoined dispatch which recently appeared in the papers of New York and other eastern cities. It is dated from Washington and reads as follows:

"The cause of statehood for New Mexico, either singly or jointly with Arizona, has been greatly injured by the revelations in Pennsylvania concerning 'Bull' Andrews with the wreck of the Enterprise National bank of Allegheny. Andrews' attorneys have admitted that he borrowed heavily from the bank through Cashier Clark, the money being devoted to the building of the Santa Fe Central railway in New Mexico. Bonds of the railway were given as security for the loan, and failure to realize on the bonds was one reason for Cashier Clark's suicide. His brief note to his wife, in which he said 'Andrews worked my ruin,' tells the whole story and is universally believed here.

"Bull' Andrews was a protégé of Matt Quay and is a brother of Wesley R. Andrews, republican state chairman of Pennsylvania. The latter is also a clerk in Senator Penrose's committee on postoffices and post roads in the senate. 'Bull' Andrews, by employing Quay methods in New Mexico, elected himself territorial delegate, and if New Mexico had been admitted as a state last winter he would have been elected United States senator. As matters now stand it is admitted here that since the Andrews exposure it is impossible for New Mexico to get into the union as a state, and it will take a hard fight to get her in, even as a part of Arizona."

In the gloaming, Oh my darling,
As the shades of night advance,
Lo! A ghastly apparition—
Can it be we're seeing haunts?

Ah! 'Tis but the Twilight Squeaklet
That affrights our startled glance—
In its daily, one-month-after Double shuffle song and dance.

"When you print the news," says the Albuquerque Morning Journal, "you don't have to be in a hurry, and complicated argument to let the people know." And the Journal might have added "when your newspaper space is worth anything you don't have to fill it with frantic appeals to the people to advertise."—Nogales Oasis.

Verily the fame of the Squeak is spreading abroad.

The Almanac is calling itself out on a sort of "Passive Resistance" strike against joint statehood. In other words the Almanac will be a dead and ossified drag on the chariot of progress, as usual.

The naval academy faculty say they fear the boys won't be manly if they don't scrap. The mayor is the man with a little foot ball game or two, now and then?

That little expose of the piker news policy of the Twilight Squeak seems to have hit the squeak in a tender spot. It brought forth at least two solid columns of hysterics.

The Citizen's sensational scoop about the late lamented Christopher is only eclipsed by its electrifying beat on the president's proclamation.

Miguel has officially proclaimed that all must give thanks. It would be interesting to know just what Miguel is most thankful for.

The Citizen is investigating a sensational rumor to the effect that Columbus was only in a trance and not dead as reported.

The scenes of wild enthusiasm at the meeting of the central committee in Santa Fe were probably never equalled in the territory.

"The afternoon paper reaches the homes," says the Twilight Squeak. That might be true of an afternoon NEWS-paper.

The Squeak is now making strenuous efforts to scoop the Santa Fe Almanac on the Declaration of Independence.

Speaking of the governorship, there's a good old song to the effect that "Nothing's too good for the Irish."

The government should detail Miguel to put a scare on those Navajos.

'Slavo is game, anyhow.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Now, therefore, We, Miguel the First, in the eighth and last year of our reign, on the eleventh month, on the nineteenth day of the month, do duly and formally proclaim that Thursday, the 24th day of November, Anno Domini 1905, be set aside as Thanksgiving day. We know that it will be Thanksgiving day whether we proclaim or not, but then as we are going out of the proclaiming business poco pronto, we think that we'll get in as many ticks as we can before we vacate. We proclaim that on this solemn occasion the ax shall fall on the neck of the festive turkey, emblematic of the dull and horrible thud with which the ax is going to fall on our official neck. We proclaim further that each and every one of our subjects shall be requested to give thanks, including our devoted vassals, Tomas Hubbell, Francisco Hubbell and 'Slavo Vigil of the county of Bernalillo, as: We also hereby issue our ukase that all those who refuse to give thanks shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred plunks or imprisonment in the Bernalillo county jail for not to exceed sixty days.

We further proclaim that we personally are deeply thankful for the following blessings:

We are thankful that we held on to our job as long as we did and played in such luck while we were it.

We are grateful that we are going to have plum pudding this Thanksgiving, even though it be the last time.

We are thankful that the writ of prohibition didn't prohibit.

We are thankful that we will have a little Pie left for this our last Thanksgiving feast on this throne.

We are deeply grateful to an All Wise Providence that our dear son, Miguel the Two did not get kidnapped.

We are thankful that our official automobile is in good running order.

We give thanks that we won't have to make any more speeches.

We are thankful that we had such a Nice Long Rest in a Quiet and Restored Spot Far from the Madmen's Crowd and the Sirenous Fights Against Entrenched Graft.

We are further thankful that this is a good sheep year and that we have a big wind of wool over in east were it.

Mexico which will keep the coyote from the door after we leave our present highly lucrative position.

We are thankful that we have got off with our little lunge game for eight long and remunerative years.

We are glad that we have been able to share our prosperity with our good friends, Max and Burke, and that they have thus been able to keep the Giant Specter of Poverty from climbing in the kitchen window.

We are thankful the Big Stick didn't hurt us any harder than it did.

We are grateful to an omniscient Providence that statehood didn't come until our term was ended anyway. After we have left the Pie Counter we don't much care a darn what kind of booming statehood the territory gets.

We do hereby choke off this proclamation by announcing that it is our inflexible will to get out of the gubernatorial chair in a day or two, and retire to private life where we may make out a precarious existence in a manner less exciting and wearing on the nerves than fighting entrenched graft.

We absolutely won't consider a third term under any circumstances whatever—unless perchance it be offered us.

Witness our hand and the great seal this nineteenth day of November in the last year of our reign.
